

Friday, June 16. 2006

Photography in the genes?

So every time I run around like a mad person, clicking away on my camera, Amalie seems to be watching me like a hawk. So, the other day where we took a "tourist" trip on the canals of Copenhagen, she got to be in charge of Brandy's camera. She was snapping away like a mad person, barely able to wrap her fingers around the camera. Sometimes making excited sounds, sometimes grunting in discontent. So we got home and we popped the camera in its dock and proceeded to transfer the pictures. To our big surprise the girl (who's only 6 at the moment), took a lot of good pictures (and a lot of bad ones too, just like the rest of us). I took a few into Photoshop, straightened a bit, auto contrasted, and cropped. Here's what I think is the best one: The new opera house in the Copenhagen Harbor, captured by a 6 year old girl. Not bad, eh?

Posted by Sune Trudslev in Photography at 09:57